NSA Must Sever CIA Ties, U Dean Claims

A member of the national advisory board of the National Students association said Thursday the NSA's relationship with the central intelligence agency must be terminated at once.

"Such a relationship contradicts the ideals of an open, democratic and independent student union," said Dr. E. G. Williamson, dean of students at the University of Minnesota and president of a national association of student deans.

"During this crisis which the NSA is undergoing," he said, student governments, leaders and individual students "should maintain and intensify their support of the association's basic philosophy and today's leadership."

Earlier this week it was disclosed that the CIA had provided millions of dollars to the NSA, and that some officers of the group apparently had worked for the CIA.

Williamson made his remarks in a telegram sent to the national advisory board of the student group.
